Option 1: A design for a personal website (portfolio/lifestyle)

What your wireframes are designed for?
Wireframes are designed for a personal portfolio website to serves as a more personalized option for sharing my information and interesting blog posts.

Any interesting aspects you took into consideration while designing?

During my designing and planning stage, I went over to google for some good sample portfolio website. However, I realized that most of the websites are basically single-page site. In general, they look appealing, but something seems to be missing. Then I realized that it is a form of interactivity with the visitor. Hence, I decided to add in an opening animation of envelope to indicate a formal introduction of myself to the visitor. Once the envelope is opened, a name card of mine will be draw out to showcase to the visitor. Name card has always been commonly used in daily life to establish a form of connection between peoples, hence the reason why I used it in my design.

The overall theme of my portfolio is minimalist, sweet, and to the point. I feel that it is important to let visitor first know more about me through minimum effort and time. As a result, they will then decide whether I am worth their time in further reading my blog posts or not.
